SATURDAY

The Dish's Danielle Fishel with Frida Lay, Key Sedila and Kris Allen

Saturday The Dish celebrates a hundred episodes of mocking the week's pop culture with plenty of special guests. Danielle Fishel usually does a great job mocking the week's gayer moments in pop culture, avoiding the easy homophobic joke. Hopefully, the special guests will include drag queens Frida Lay and Kay Sedila.

This week Logo Documentaries brings Hair World, which follow the competitors at the international Hair World Hairdressing Competition. Meanwhile, there's a new episode of Color Splash with David Bromstad giving a beachy look to an office and a bedroom.

It's not specifically gay, but I'm excited that this week's Saturday Night Live host is Breaking Bad's Bryan Cranston. I thought Cranston's comic talents were severely underrated in his Malcolm in the Middle days and Breaking Bad has given him a chance to show he can be funny in a very dark story. Hopefully, I won't let my expectations exceed SNL's capabilities.
