

Surprise – These HGTV Hosts Are Friends in Real Life!

PopSugar
Unique Visitors Per Month: 3,226,785
September 11th, 2015

You don't have to watch much HGTV to realize that almost everyone who appears on the network is uncommonly friendly. That's part of what's so great about HGTV: people are kind, no disaster can't be overcome, and home buyers and owners settle into beautiful homes at the end. We got to wondering if appearance is reality when it comes to HGTV – could the stars of the network possibly get along in real life?

David Bromstad recently explained part of the network's close-knit vibe. He told us, "The people at HGTV, from the talent all the way down to the secretaries, are amazing people. They feel like they know you; I feel like I know them."

And thanks to Instagram, their HGTV family bonding is on display for all to see. HGTV's stars can't get enough of hanging out with each other even when they aren't filming – and here's the photo proof!

Genevieve Gorder and David Bromstad

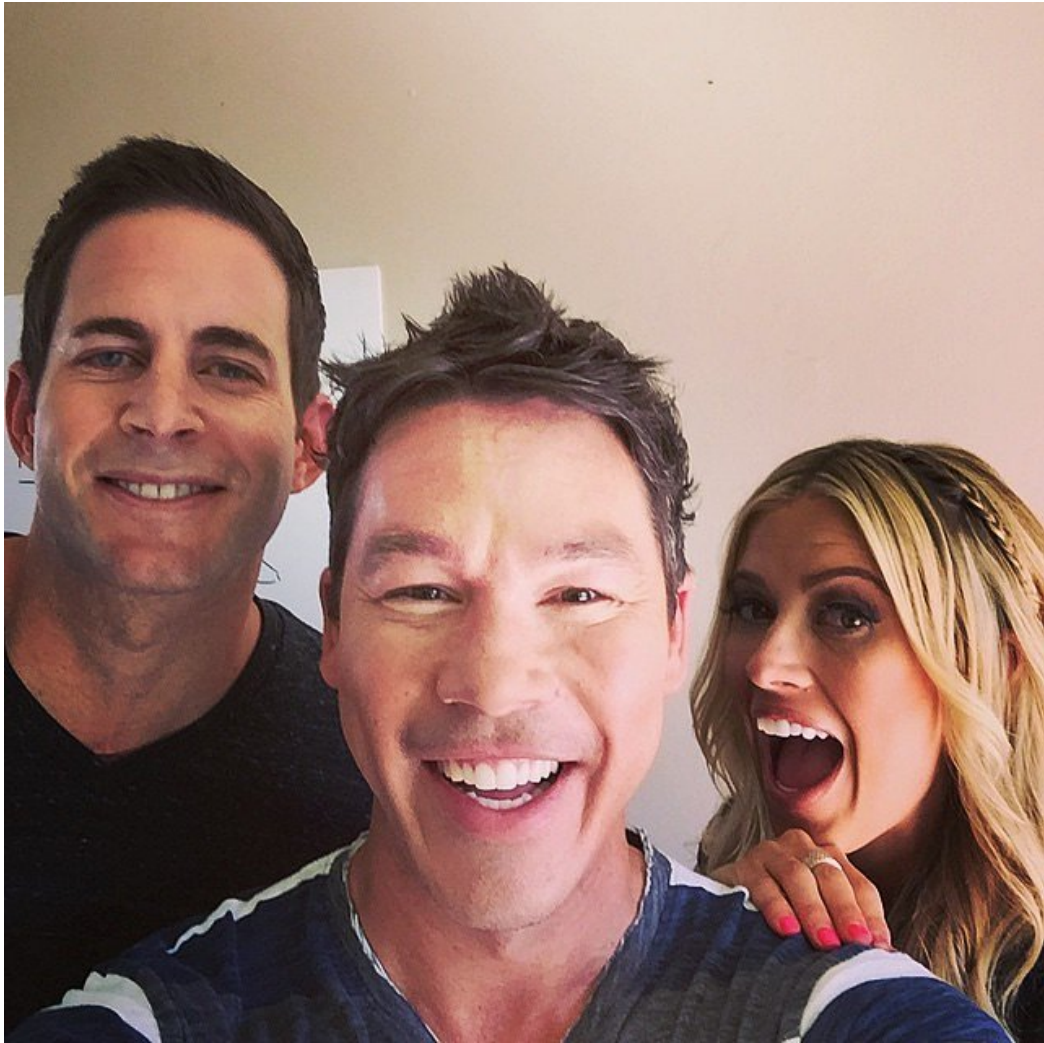

Longtime HGTV personalities Genevieve Gorder and David Bromstad united over their both having grown up in Minnesota.

David Bromstad and Josh Temple

David Bromstad and Josh Temple got a chance to work together on Beach Flip – and now they're fast friends!

Tarek el Moussa, David Bromstad, and Christina el Moussa

David Bromstad did not seem to mind being the man in the middle of Flip or Flop's Christina and Tarek el Moussa!

Josh Temple and David Bromstad

Beach Flip's Josh Temple and David Bromstad bond over exercise.

Josh Temple, Nicole Curtis, and David Bromstad

Beach Flip's Josh Temple, Nicole Curtis, and David Bromstad definitely mixed work and play.