If your child's bedroom is still rocking pastels and bunnies long after he or she's reached touchscreen mastery, it's time for an upgrade. But while kitchens and bathrooms are splurge-worthy, kids' spaces rarely merit a serious investment.

"Kids rooms should be fun and reflect your child's personality," says designer and HGTV personality David Bromstad. "It doesn't cost much. All you need is a little creativity."

With that in mind, here are some expert-approved ways to add pizzazz and rework your child's bedroom for $100 or less.

DIY a mural

Create a visual focal point by installing a mural. While designer and HGTV personality David Bromstad favors the site MuralsYourWay.com (prices start at $216), there are plenty of more affordable and low commitment options out there, including creating your own faux fresco using washi tape.
