

Projects That Are Worth the Time and Money

HGTV Magazine talked to HGTV and DIY Network experts to explain why spending a few hours on—or forking over some cash for—these projects really pays off.

Worth the money: Hiring a window cleaner

“Depending on the number of windows you have and how big they are, hiring a pro may cost a few hundred dollars, but it means you don’t have to climb up and down a ladder, which is both tiring and potentially dangerous. Ask about discounts—some companies offer a deal if they’re cleaning both the insides and outsides of windows, as opposed to just the outsides.”—David Bromstad, Beach Flip
